IMMIGRATION PARTNERSHIP

Strategy 2010

Welcome

In the summer of 2010, new immigrants to Kingston were asked in a survey if they saw themselves in Kingston five years down the road: 40% expected to live elsewhere. That tendency is nothing new: about one-third of immigrants to Kingston in the 1990's had left our community by the time of the 2006 Census.

How can these trends be reversed to keep our community economically viable and vibrant? How can we identify and address the needs of our newest community members in order to keep them in Kingston?

We are fortunate to have representatives from settlement services, public institutions, community agencies, education and research institutions, health care providers, committed businesses, and economic development agencies sitting together at the Kingston Immigration Partnership Council table to work on strategies to attract a greater number of immigrants to Kingston, seek to understand their needs, and promote a welcoming and inclusive atmosphere in our community for the purpose of retaining new immigrants.

As co-chairs of the KIP Council we look forward to guiding the community-driven efforts of the Council, and encourage all community members to participate in KIP activities and offer their ideas and feedback. Remember, making immigrants a part of our community is in our long-term best interest – and thus is everybody's responsibility.

Sincerely,

Chander Datta and Monica Stewart

“I pointed out to them the site of their future metropolis, and gained for persecuted principles a sanctuary, for myself and followers, a home.”

– Captain Michael Grass

Introduction

Captain Grass spoke of refugees that fled their war-torn homes and journeyed to a new land. These refugees, their numbers greatly diminished since leaving home, arrived on Kingston's shores, and quickly joined in the making of Canada – all the way back in 1784.

What was true over two hundred years ago, as the Loyalist refugees made their way down the St. Lawrence, is true today, as newcomers make their way up the 401 – Kingston becomes a home to those who settle on its shores. The distances traveled have certainly increased over the years, while the globe seems to have gotten much smaller, but all the while Kingston has grown and changed with the settlement of each generation of immigrants. As we look to our future – metropolis or not – we must consider how Kingston will remain a welcoming home to immigrants. Our future depends on it.

Making Kingston home to the next generation of newcomers is the business of the Kingston Immigration Partnership. Built around the simple idea that making immigrants a part of our community is everybody's responsibility, this Partnership is connecting and coordinating efforts – both big and small – to attract, welcome, and integrate immigrants to our community.

This document is designed so that the whole Kingston community – newcomers, long-term residents, businesses, social services, government, and community groups - can learn about and contribute to making Kingston a welcoming and inclusive place for new Canadians. Informed by conversations and research with the diverse range of people and organizations in our city, the Strategic Action Plan consists of achievable goals and specific strategies and actions, grouped under eight themes:

Employment

Education and Training

Information, Orientation and Welcoming

Racism and Discrimination

Language

Social Supports and Community Connections

Health and Wellness

Housing, Transportation and Family Services

The partnership is coordinated through the work of the KIP Council, a multi-sector group representing the diversity of organizations and businesses in Kingston. For the plan to truly succeed, though, it needs the support of the full community. As you read through this document, think about what your role – as friend, neighbour, colleague, manager, teacher, healer, service provider, etc. – will be in this effort.

Context

What instruments we have agree: we have changed, we are changing. Canada continues to undergo a vast demographic transformation driven by immigration. The country from which originated the phrase “global village” is becoming just that: a culturally-diverse and globally-connected nation. In fact, Statistics Canada now predicts that 1 in 4 Canadians will be foreign born by the year 2031. In Canada’s largest city, Toronto, so-called “visible minorities” will be by then the overwhelming majority. With this change will come both opportunities and challenges for the Kingston community, as we try to thrive as a small city in a big, diverse world.

That same Statistics Canada study predicts both a significant change within Kingston and a growing diversity gap between Kingston and larger cities around Canada. The report predicts a small change in the number of foreign-born residents in the Kingston area (from 12% in 2006 to 14% in 2031), but a relatively large increase of visible minorities (from 6% in 2006 to 11% in 2031). While the overall number of immigrants will change very little, the ethnic make-up of our immigrants will change dramatically, as the European immigrants who arrived a generation or two ago are replaced by the next generation from Asia, Africa, and the Americas. However, that visible change in Kingston pales in comparison to the transformation of Canada’s larger cities – thus the gap. The differences in demographic make-up, and all that entails, between Kingston and cities like Toronto, Ottawa, or even Waterloo and Windsor, will only increase – if the study holds true.

That “if” depends on us – and on the importance we place on attracting newcomers to join our community. Do we sit back and follow that path set out for us, or start now so as to make sure that Kingston is a part of this cultural shift – as a prosperous, vibrant, and diverse city?

Immigrant Populations

From the 2006 Census, approximately 14% of Kingston residents are immigrants. This percentage is lower than both Ontario (28%) and Canada as a whole (20%). According to Citizenship and Immigration Canada, Kingston receives approximately 380 new permanent residents per year: this number has remained more or less constant since 2000. In comparison, other small centres in Ontario such as Guelph and Peterborough have seen high growth in their immigrant populations over the past decade.

A large proportion of immigrants living in Kingston, almost every 3 in 4, arrived before 1991; comparatively, just over half of immigrants living in Ontario and Canada settled before that year. By country of origin, the largest immigrant community in Kingston continues to be from the United Kingdom. Other Western European countries such as Portugal, the Netherlands, Germany, and Italy are also well represented in the area, as are immigrants from the United States.

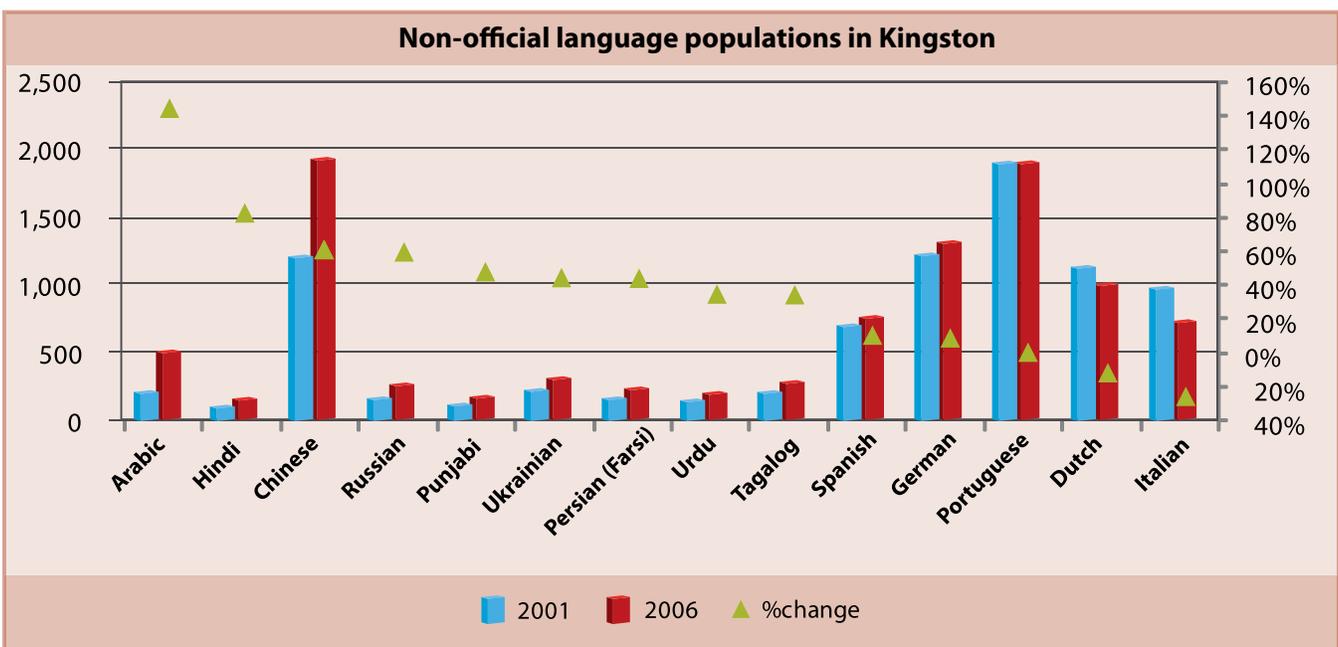

Changing Patterns

Examining the growth of immigrant communities presents a different story. The population base of most European-origin communities in Kingston has been at best steady or in decline, while more newcomers are arriving from Asia, the Middle East, and Central and South America. For the top fifteen countries of origin in the Kingston area, the only communities that showed a net growth between 1996 and 2006 were China, India, Pakistan, South Korea, El Salvador, Egypt and the United States. Immigrants continue to arrive in Kingston from Europe, but not to the same degree as was the case historically.

Data on Kingston residents' mother tongue further illustrates this shift. The most popular mother tongues reported in 2006 (excluding English and French) were Chinese, Portuguese, German, Dutch and Spanish. Examining growth between 2001 and 2006, the fastest growing linguistic communities in Kingston include Arabic, Hindi, Chinese, Russian, and Punjabi.

In summary, immigrants in Kingston can be broadly divided into two main groups. The majority of immigrants arrived prior to 1991 and predominately came from Europe or the United States. The second group is much smaller but growing, and represents populations arriving from other areas of the world, especially Asia, the Middle East, and Central and South America. This demographic shift has important implications for providing services to newcomers and creating a welcoming community in Kingston.

Services for Newcomers in Kingston

Kingston currently has several agencies that provide services specifically for immigrants. Immigrant Services Kingston and Area (ISKA) and Association Canadienne-Française de l'Ontario – Mille-Îles (ACFOMI) both offer settlement services, including individual settlement counseling, group information sessions, and referrals, to help newcomers adjust to a new life in Kingston. KEYS Community Employment Services provides employment counseling and Job Search Workshops (JSW) for newcomers, and together with Kingston Literacy and Skills, hosts the Language Instruction for Newcomers to Canada program. Other government-funded ESL classes are provided by Limestone Community Education and Loyola School of Adult and Continuing Education,.

The City of Kingston recently launched an online information portal for newcomers to the city, available at www.immigrationkingston.ca. The site provides information on all aspects of immigrating to Kingston, including immigration procedures, settling in the community, and surviving the first Canadian winter.

Our Partnership

The Kingston Immigration Partnership is part of the Ontario-wide Local Immigration Partnership (LIP) program, a joint initiative of Citizenship and Immigration Canada and the Ontario Ministry of Citizenship and Immigration. Initiated in 2008, the overall purpose of the program is to support local communities in serving and integrating immigrants, through the creation of a community-built strategic plan and a collaborative local council representing multiple stakeholders.

Today there are over 30 LIP projects across the province of Ontario. Each LIP is at a different stage of developing their plan and reaching out to diverse stakeholders, but their impact has already been noticed: in March 2010, the House of Commons Standing Committee on Citizenship and Immigration identified the LIP project as a “best practice” in settlement, and recommended continued support in Ontario and expansion to other provinces.

The Kingston Immigration Partnership was initiated by Kingston Community Health Centres (KCHC), KEYS Community Employment Centre and the Kingston Economic Development Corporation (KEDCO). These three partners recognized the need to begin a conversation between businesses, government, and community organizations around the issue of immigration to Kingston, in order to build sustainable partnerships and launch innovative actions to make Kingston a welcoming community. Together, they successfully applied for funding under the Local Immigration Partnership program, with the official launch of the KIP taking place on September 30, 2009 in the City of Kingston’s historic Memorial Hall.

KIP Council

The Kingston Immigration Partnership is guided by a Council made up of 12-16 representatives from KIP member organizations. Its mandate is to provide leadership to the Kingston community in its efforts to welcome and integrate immigrants.

The Council is selected to represent a broad cross-section of the community.

Representatives serve for a two-year term; each year, half of the Council is replaced by new representatives. The Council meets up to six times a year, at least one of which is an open public assembly.

KIP Member Organizations

All organizations in Kingston, be they businesses, social services, non-profit organizations, faith groups, ethno-cultural associations, government bodies or any other type of group, are invited to show their support for the KIP by signing up as a Member Organization. KIP member agencies are listed on our website and are eligible to join the KIP Council.

Planning Process

From the beginning of this Partnership, we have worked to build a plan for settlement that was driven from start to finish by the community. Through a participatory planning framework, the community planted seeds at our very first Assembly that grew and evolved into the plan we have presented here.

At the Assemblies, community members identified the challenges of settlement and immigration, then organized them into themes, and then proposed goals for our plan. From there, we brought various stakeholders together at planning tables to identify strategies and actions that would help us achieve those goals, and form the Strategic Action Plan.

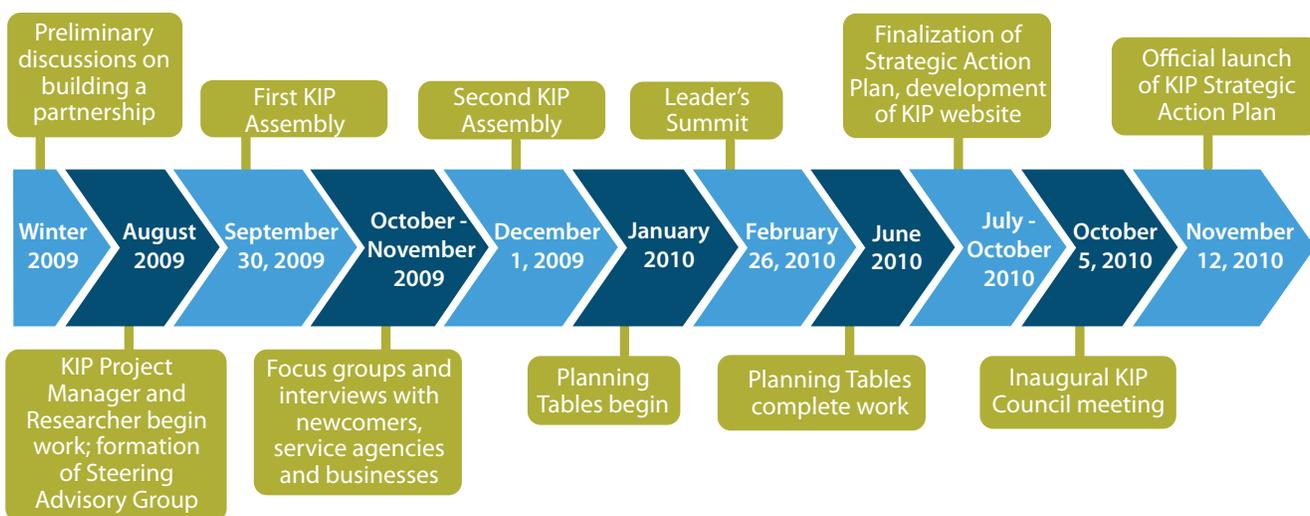

Two public assemblies were held in Fall 2009, one at the end of September and the second in December. Attendance at both events was high, with over 150 at the first (split between morning and evening sessions) and 120 at the second (one session); participants included newcomers, settled immigrants, long-term residents, and representatives from local government, businesses, community organizations, and service agencies. Along with introducing the KIP to the community, the goal of these assemblies was to learn from the community, through facilitated small-group discussion and activities to engage participants and offer the opportunity for feedback on our work.

During Fall 2009, fourteen focus groups were held with a wide range of people and organizational representatives, including different groups of newcomers (working immigrants, women, youth, Francophone immigrants), and representatives from service agencies, the business community and local ethno-cultural associations. The focus groups were co-hosted with the City of Kingston for the development of their Newcomers Web Portal and generally focused on newcomers' impressions of Kingston and the challenges they faced on arrival. Interviews were conducted in Fall 2009 with 15 key informants, including local politicians, service providers, and leaders of local charities and businesses.

Based on the feedback from the first assembly and findings from the focus groups and interviews, the KIP generated a list of 32 common needs and challenges that newcomers face in Kingston. At the second assembly, participants were asked to group these needs into common themes and generate ideas on how to address these challenges.

Based on these themes, three planning tables consisting of representatives from 14-20 local organizations and businesses were convened in Winter 2010. These tables met three times to review the ideas brought forward from the community and create achievable strategies and actions for the Strategic Plan.

Timeline

Recent Developments

Time does not stand still while a plan is developed. During 2009-2010, as the KIP worked to bring diverse stakeholders together to build the strategy and create a local partnership council, momentum was building. The following are some of the community's accomplishments over the planning period that have made us a more welcoming community for immigrants.

Launch of the Newcomer's Web Portal by the City of Kingston

Organization of the first annual Internationally Educated Professionals Conference by KEYS

ISKA moved to a more central location in mid-town Kingston

ACFOMI launched a new settlement service in Kingston's west end

City Council voted to join the Canadian Coalition of Municipalities Against Racism and Discrimination

The successful organization of the Kingston Multicultural Arts Festival

Strategic Action Plan

The Strategic Action Plan is the centerpiece of the KIP Strategy. Based on feedback from focus groups, interviews and public assemblies, the KIP identified eight themes representing common areas of challenge for newcomers to Kingston:

Employment

Education and Training

Information, Orientation and Welcoming

Racism and Discrimination

Language

Social Supports and Community Connections

Health and Wellness

Housing, Transportation and Family Services

Each theme consists of several goals that demonstrate where Kingston as a welcoming community should be; each goal, in turn, is made up of strategies and actions that tell us how the goals can be achieved.

The Strategic Action Plan focuses primarily on initiatives that can be reasonably accomplished in Kingston within the five-year time-frame of our Strategy. However, the KIP also recognizes the importance of including new ideas and innovative approaches in the plan as a source of inspiration. Also, some challenges that newcomers face represent broader issues that also affect long-term Canadian residents in Kingston or newcomers in other cities; while the KIP cannot tackle these problems on its own, it can provide recommendations that advocate for larger-scale change. The Strategic Action Plan thus includes both Innovations and Recommendations. As you go through this section, keep in mind that the different aspects of newcomer settlement are all connected. We expect that each proposed strategy and action will likewise have an impact on multiple needs: for example, supporting newcomers to participate in local organizations, projects and events (a strategy within the Social Supports and Community Connections theme) can help newcomers practice their language skills and build networks to find employment, as well as build the connections with Canadian-born residents that help reduce racism and discrimination. For simplicity and clarity, though, in our Plan each action belongs to only one strategy, which belongs to only one goal, which belongs to only one theme.

Guiding Principles

The work of the Kingston Immigration Partnership is guided by the ten following principles:

Settlement by all:

As a community, we will welcome newcomers; making newcomers a part of the community is everyone's responsibility.

Building on our strengths:

We will attract newcomers to build on our existing and emerging strengths in the fields of education, health care, green economy, and research & development.

Attraction by reputation:

We will attract newcomers through the opportunities and support that we offer to immigrants, international students and temporary residents already present in our community.

Waste not, want not:

We will not accept underemployment as suitable employment, and will strive to ensure that immigrants find work related to their field of expertise.

Growing our social capital:

We recognize and support the familial and social networks of newcomers and immigrant communities, and will work to integrate them with existing formal and informal community networks.

Including-by-doing:

We will create opportunities for inclusion by encouraging the hiring of newcomers, including newcomers in boards of directors, committees, and decision-making processes, and actively including newcomers in professional and social networks.

Coordinate, then innovate:

We will check with the community for potential partnerships and shared goals when planning new initiatives, and we will work for their continuity through those partnerships.

Learn from the best:

We will seek out best practices in settlement and newcomer integration, and adapt them to the Kingston context.

Tearing down barriers:

We will build better relations among the distinct communities of Kingston, and enable the community as a whole to support and integrate immigrants.

Sharing and celebrating diversity:

We will work to create opportunities for the wider community to share in, learn from, and value the myriad cultures of our newcomers and established immigrant communities.

Employment

One of the biggest challenges facing newcomers to Kingston is finding meaningful employment. Difficulties in gaining Canadian work experience and accessing the “hidden” or informal job market can limit newcomers to low-paying “survival jobs” during their initial time in Kingston. Employers may not be aware of the challenges that newcomers face, or how to best support immigrant employees in the workplace. Newcomer entrepreneurs may also have difficulty in finding the information and resources they need to start their own business.

Goal 1: Employers, immigrant-serving agencies and community stakeholders in Kingston will work together to ensure that employers are supported in creating high-quality opportunities for newcomers.

Innovations

- Getting that first job in Canada without Canadian experience is difficult. We hope to develop a “First Canadian Experience” internship program, where local employers offer fixed-period internships to internationally-educated professionals.
- Sometimes newcomers don’t have the language or workplace skills required to find employment, but need an income to support themselves and their families. We could create a social enterprise that allows newcomers facing barriers to employment to gain immediate work experience.
- Access to credit and workspace is a challenge to any entrepreneur, but often more difficult to some one new to Canada and Kingston. We could create incubation spaces and micro-loan programs for newcomers to start their own businesses.
- Some newcomers arrive with the intent to buy or invest in existing business. Meanwhile, local business owners, looking to move on, need to plan their succession. Kingston could recruit potential entrepreneurs and business class immigrants to invest in our community.
- Create a “Every door is the right door” approach to serving newcomers
- Newcomer youth are facing both growing up and becoming Canadian and are always in need of somewhere to feel they belong. We could create a Drop-in Space for them to learn, share or simply hang out.
- Build towards a “multicultural library” that provides materials, programs and services for Kingston’s diverse communities.
- We know that the three-month waiting period for OHIP coverage is a challenge to newcomers, and a concerted effort to cover that gap would raise our profile as a welcoming community. We could create a subsidized health and dental insurance program for those first three months.
- Schools are often a doorway into the community for immigrant families, and the number of newcomer students attending our schools is on the rise. The school boards, with support of settlement services, could create Welcome Centres for newcomer students and their parents.

Recommendations

- Many professional newcomers arrive in Canada expecting to practice their profession in their new country – only to find out how difficult and complex the certification process can be. Citizenship and Immigration Canada and the Department of Foreign Affairs should make stronger efforts to fully inform immigrants, before arriving in Canada, of the challenges of credential recognition.
- The Provincial Government provides wage subsidies to create employment opportunities. While our employment agencies ensure those funds go as far as they can to create opportunities for newcomers, sometimes those funds run short for the people that could benefit greatly from that first job in Canada. The Province of Ontario should guarantee access to Employment Ontario funding for newcomers.
- Newcomer grandparents are often at home caring for their grandchildren, and miss out on opportunities to participate in the community. CIC should allow grandparents and other family members caring for children to access child-minding services, so that they can participate in language instruction classes and other settlement activities.
- Kingston City Council recently voted to join the Canadian Coalition of Municipalities against Racism and Discrimination. The Kingston community should support the City of Kingston as it follows through on its commitment to join the Coalition and create an anti-racism program.
- The City of Kingston needs to play a role in settlement of newcomers, as well as in the work to create a welcoming community free of discrimination. The City of Kingston should appoint or hire a staff person as Diversity Officer for the City of Kingston.
- We need to welcome our newcomers from the very first day. The Province of Ontario should remove the three-month waiting period to access OHIP.
- Newcomers, like many Canadians, struggle with the high cost of childcare – municipal, provincial, and federal governments should make childcare more affordable.

- Newcomers are more likely to depend on the transit system – particularly in their first year in Kingston. Increased immigration should go hand and hand with increased transit service (coverage, frequency, and service hours).

Implementation Framework

The value of any strategic plan is in its “follow-through”. The KIP has engaged the community in the identification of needs and in the generation of ideas, and has built up broad support for this Partnership and this plan; now these words must be translated into deeds.

This document is a community plan – meaning the responsibility for reaching the goals we have set out for supporting immigrants is shared by the whole community. This collaborative approach to planning creates opportunities for cooperation and partnership, but also poses a threat we must be mindful of – because the plan is owned by all, we run the risk that it will be owned by none. No one organization is wholly responsible for the implementation of this plan, so we must create a framework that creates a sense of shared responsibility for the implementation of the plan. In short, the “Settlement by all” principle must guide the implementation of this plan.

The Role of the KIP Council

The Council brings together representatives of a wide array of local organizations, institutions, and businesses, all of which are important to the successful settlement and integration of new immigrants. The KIP Council’s role is to coordinate community efforts to serve and support newcomers, particularly through coordinating and monitoring the implementation of the Strategic Action Plan.

Given that the Strategic Action Plan is a multi-year vision of what the Kingston community plans to do in order to make Kingston more welcoming and inclusive to immigrants, the Council will need to set annual priorities for the implementation of the plan, and then report back to the community at the end of each year.

Planning Cycle

The goals, strategies and actions of the Strategic Action Plan have been designed to provide direction to the Kingston community over the next five years. During that time period, the KIP Council may add or modify strategies and actions in response to changing needs and priorities, as well as ongoing research and feedback. A complete update of the plan will be undertaken at the end of the five year cycle.

The Strategic Action Plan offers a comprehensive approach to settlement – covering jobs, language, community involvement, education, health, and more. This complexity means that as a community, we will have to approach the implementation one step at a time – and will have to set our priorities as we move through the various actions in the plan.

On an annual basis, the KIP Council will set priority strategies, which KIP staff will then facilitate with community partners. These priorities will constitute the annual KIP Agenda. At the end of the annual cycle, the KIP Council will present its Report Card, which will evaluate the implementation of that year’s Agenda as well as the overall Strategic Action Plan. The Report Card will also make recommendations for future action.

To mark the end of one annual cycle and the beginning of another, the KIP will hold an Assembly as an open community meeting. At this Assembly, the Council will present its Report Card for the outgoing year, the Agenda for the incoming year, and the incoming members of the KIP Council.
